I beg leave to observe that it appears upon the proofs, the parents of the unhappy children committed to his care have frequently made their complaints to him in the most modest terms, but without any redress. And I would further observe that it cant reasonably be thought necessary to admonish a schoolmaster, who is in holy orders, that he ought to read Prayers to his scholars, and thereby promote in them an early affection for Religion. Can it be thought necessary to admonish a gentleman of a liberall education in such an office, that he ought not to be absent from his school two or three months together during the time his scholars are attending there Can it be thought necessary to admonish him, that during the short space of time he resides amongst his scholars, he entirely neglects to examine the exercises enjoyed them,...
