Excerpt: . . . I love to imagine the charm that wrapt his spirit when from the hither shore of the Mer de Glace, looking across that ocean of ice, he cast his eyes from base to summit, 8000 feet along the ascending obelisk of the Aiguille du Dru, or scanned the long, melancholy desolation of the Moraines, that bound the Mer de Glace, on either hand. But I must no longer indulge in these retrospections. Our traveller, pursuing his journey, visited Milan and Pavia, and thence proceeded to Turin. In fine, he spent the summer in visiting various places upon the continent. The following winter was passed at Edinburgh again in sedulous attendance upon the lectures, and in active business at the Infirmary; so that, he certainly enjoyed remarkable opportunities to become acquainted with matters of his profession and make amends for the deficiencies of his early instruction. At the commencement at Edinburgh held in August 1823, he presented an elegant Latin Thesis, de Corporis Dolore, and having fulfilled the requirements of the Institution in his examination, was passed Doctor of Medicine of that school. Certainly Dr. Morton must have now acquired solid claims to the character of Physician, in which vocation he was about to present himself in his native city; for he had commenced his studies in 1817, under a meritorious and able private teacher, and so had six long years of earnest studies and constant progress. Dr. Morton ever looked with distrust upon...
