Excerpt: . . . 11 any of the evaluators. apparently, this is a hard and fast rule. you present yourself at the office. Someone is called down from upstairs to talk to you, but cannot answer any questions or take down any new information. It is impossible to find out what is going on or if they have the correct or most recent data in your chart. this recently has been improved with the addition of a receptionist who can at least tell you if they have the records, but nothing else. after a period of six to twelve months, you receive a letter that you must reply to or report for an additional physical exam that in my case was performed by a surgical resident in training status without regard to training in the applicable specialty. finally, a judge was provided in october of 2002 who the disabled american Veterans representative and i appeared before and pre-sented my case. the judge insisted that all duty--if i might have just a few more minutes to conclude. thank you. the judge insisted that all duty conducted while a reservist was considered inactive duty status. as most military personnel are aware, i tried to explain to her that reservists were called to active duty for periods of time from a few days to several months. Crews flew all overseas missions, which were numerous, on an ac-tive duty status, which was a requirement by nato. active...
